

SEARCHES FOR FACULTY POSITIONS BEGINNING FALL 2021

Position Descriptions for AY 2021-2022 Searches

Tenure Track Faculty Searches

Department of Chemistry

Assistant Professor of Chemistry

The Department of Chemistry at Bryn Mawr College invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track Assistant Professor position in biochemistry to begin August 1, 2022. The successful candidate will be expected to teach in the Biochemistry and Molecular Biology Program and at all levels in the Chemistry Department and contribute to the development and teaching of a diverse and inclusive curriculum, including interdisciplinary programs and other college-wide initiatives such as the 360 Program and the Emily Balch Seminars. The candidate will be expected to establish an ongoing program of scholarly research that involves undergraduate and graduate students. A Ph.D. is required by the start date and post-doctoral research experience is desirable.

To apply for this position, candidates must submit a cover letter, curriculum vitae, teaching philosophy, statement of proposed research (limited to 5 pages), and statement of demonstrated commitment to diversity and inclusion to the Chemistry Search Committee via Interfolio at:

<https://apply.interfolio.com/90012>. In addition, arrange for three letters of recommendation to be submitted via Interfolio to the Chemistry Search Committee. Applications received by October 1, 2021 will receive full consideration.

Recognizing health and safety concerns during this time, the College will be as flexible as possible in determining the nature of any interviews or meetings (virtual/remote and/or in-person interaction) that are conducted for this search.

Bryn Mawr College is a distinguished liberal arts college for women with a vibrant faculty of scholar-teachers, a talented staff, and intellectually curious students eager to make a difference in the world. The College is committed to increasing the diversity of its students, faculty, staff, and curricular offerings with a particular focus on enhancing ethnic and racial diversity and advancing social justice and inclusion. We believe diversity strengthens our community and enriches the education of our students. We have a student body of 1,300 undergraduates (32 percent are U.S. students of color and 19 percent are international students). There are 340 graduate students in coeducational graduate programs in social work, humanities, and science. Bryn Mawr College is located in metropolitan Philadelphia and enjoys strong consortial relationships with Haverford College, Swarthmore College, and the University of Pennsylvania. Bryn Mawr College is an equal-opportunity employer; candidates from underrepresented groups and women are especially encouraged to apply.

Department of Computer Science

Assistant Professor of Computer Science

The Department of Computer Science at Bryn Mawr College invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track Assistant Professor position to begin August 1, 2022. We are seeking candidates specializing in any of the following areas: theory, algorithms, or systems. The successful candidate will contribute to the development and teaching of a diverse and inclusive undergraduate curriculum, including interdisciplinary programs and college-wide initiatives such as the 360 Program and the Emily Balch Seminars. The candidate will be expected to teach courses at all levels of the undergraduate program in computer science and to establish an active and successful research program. Candidates must have completed all Ph.D. requirements in Computer Science or a closely related field by the start date.

To apply for this position, candidates must submit a cover letter, curriculum vitae, teaching philosophy, research statement, and statement of demonstrated commitment to diversity and inclusion to the Computer Science Search Committee via Interfolio at: <https://apply.interfolio.com/90015>. In addition, arrange for three letters of recommendation to be submitted via Interfolio to the Computer Science Search Committee. Applications will be accepted until the position is filled. Applications received by October 18, 2021 will receive full consideration.

Recognizing health and safety concerns during this time, the College will be as flexible as possible in determining the nature of any interviews or meetings (virtual/remote and/or in-person interaction) that are conducted for this search.

Bryn Mawr College is a distinguished liberal arts college for women with a vibrant faculty of scholar-teachers, a talented staff, and intellectually curious students eager to make a difference in the world. The College is committed to increasing the diversity of its students, faculty, staff, and curricular offerings with a particular focus on enhancing ethnic and racial diversity and advancing social justice and inclusion. We believe diversity strengthens our community and enriches the education of our students. We have a student body of 1,300 undergraduates (32 percent are U.S. students of color and 19 percent are international students). There are 340 graduate students in coeducational graduate programs in social work, humanities, and science. Bryn Mawr College is located in metropolitan Philadelphia and enjoys strong consortial relationships with Haverford College, Swarthmore College, and the University of Pennsylvania.

Bryn Mawr College is an equal-opportunity employer; candidates from underrepresented groups and women are especially encouraged to apply.

Arts Program in Dance

Assistant Professor of Dance

The Dance Program at Bryn Mawr College invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track Assistant Professor position with a terminal degree of an M.F.A. or Ph.D. in Dance to begin August 1, 2022. Our desired colleague is an artist scholar committed to creative, research, and pedagogical practice, and one who will contribute to the development and teaching of a diverse and inclusive undergraduate curriculum and to interdisciplinary programs and college-wide initiatives such as the 360 Program and Emily Balch Seminars. The successful candidate should have a broad perspective on the field of dance and embrace the decolonization of dance by advancing all dance and movement as equitable practices. We welcome multiple genres of contemporary dance practice and performance along with interdisciplinary specializations such as film/screendance, rhythm/soundscaping, improvisation/freestyle, environmental studies, gender studies, community-based/socially-engaged practice, and technology/digital studies.

To apply for this position, candidates must submit a cover letter, curriculum vitae, teaching philosophy, research statement, and statement of demonstrated commitment to diversity and inclusion to the Dance Search Committee via Interfolio at: <https://apply.interfolio.com/90022>. In addition, arrange for three letters of recommendation to be submitted via Interfolio to the Dance Search Committee. Applications received by September 20, 2021 will receive full consideration.

Recognizing health and safety concerns during this time, the College will be as flexible as possible in determining the nature of any interviews or meetings (virtual/remote and/or in-person interaction) that are conducted for this search.

Bryn Mawr College is a distinguished liberal arts college for women with a vibrant faculty of scholar-teachers, a talented staff, and intellectually curious students eager to make a difference in the world. The College is committed to increasing the diversity of its students, faculty, staff, and curricular offerings with a particular focus on enhancing ethnic and racial diversity and advancing social justice and inclusion. We believe diversity strengthens our community and enriches the education of our students. We have a student body of 1,300 undergraduates (32 percent are U.S. students of color and 19 percent are international students). There are 340 graduate students in coeducational graduate programs in social work, humanities, and science. Bryn Mawr College is located in metropolitan Philadelphia and enjoys strong consortial relationships with Haverford College, Swarthmore College, and the University of Pennsylvania. Bryn Mawr College is an equal-opportunity employer; candidates from underrepresented groups and women are especially encouraged to apply.

Department of Economics

Assistant Professor of Economics

The Department of Economics at Bryn Mawr College invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track Assistant Professor position in applied microeconomics with a primary field in environmental economics and/or industrial organization to begin August 1, 2022. The successful candidate will be expected to pursue high-quality scholarship and teach courses in their field(s) of specialization plus core undergraduate courses including a one-semester introductory course. The candidate will contribute to the development and teaching of a diverse and inclusive undergraduate curriculum, including interdisciplinary programs and college-wide initiatives such as the 360 Program and the Emily Balch Seminars. Candidates must have teaching experience, evidence of research potential, and have completed all the requirements for a Ph.D. in economics by the start date.

To apply for this position, submit a cover letter, curriculum vitae, sample of current research, statement that addresses teaching philosophy and teaching effectiveness, and statement of demonstrated commitment to diversity and inclusion to the Economics Search Committee via Interfolio at: <https://apply.interfolio.com/90027>. In addition, arrange for three letters of recommendation to be submitted via Interfolio to the Economics Search Committee. Complete applications received by November 15, 2021 will receive full consideration for interviews.

Recognizing health and safety concerns during this time, the College will be as flexible as possible in determining the nature of any interviews or meetings (virtual/remote and/or in-person interaction) that are conducted for this search.

Bryn Mawr College is a distinguished liberal arts college for women with a vibrant faculty of scholar-teachers, a talented staff, and intellectually curious students eager to make a difference in the world. The College is committed to increasing the diversity of its students, faculty, staff, and curricular offerings with a particular focus on enhancing ethnic and racial diversity and advancing social justice and inclusion. We believe diversity strengthens our community and enriches the education of our students. We have a student body of 1,300 undergraduates (32 percent are U.S. students of color and 19 percent are international students). There are 340 graduate students in coeducational graduate programs in social work, humanities, and science. Bryn Mawr College is located in metropolitan Philadelphia and enjoys strong consortial relationships with Haverford College, Swarthmore College, and the University of Pennsylvania. Bryn Mawr College is an equal-opportunity employer; candidates from underrepresented groups and women are especially encouraged to apply.

Department of Literatures in English

Assistant Professor of Literatures in English

The Department of Literatures in English at Bryn Mawr College invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track Assistant Professor position in Film Studies, to begin August 1, 2022. The successful candidate will contribute to the development and teaching of a diverse and inclusive undergraduate curriculum, including interdisciplinary programs and college-wide initiatives such as the 360 Program and the Emily Balch Seminars. In the Department of Literatures in English, faculty teach at all levels of the undergraduate curriculum. We are interested in scholars whose work spans literary and film studies. The successful candidate is expected to teach the core course of our major, Methods of Literary Study, and to contribute to Bryn Mawr's Film Studies program, including both introductory and advanced courses. All areas of film studies expertise are welcome, but we especially encourage applications from scholars with the following specializations: global Anglophone or Asian American and Pacific Islander cinema, television and/or new media. Candidates must have completed all Ph.D. requirements by the start date.

To apply for this position, candidates must submit a cover letter, curriculum vitae, teaching philosophy, research statement, and statement of demonstrated commitment to diversity and inclusion to the Literatures in English Search Committee via Interfolio at: <https://apply.interfolio.com/90031>. In addition, arrange for three letters of recommendation to be submitted via Interfolio to the Literatures in English Search Committee. Applications received by November 1, 2021 will receive full consideration.

Recognizing health and safety concerns during this time, the College will be as flexible as possible in determining the nature of any interviews or meetings (virtual/remote and/or in-person interaction) that are conducted for this search.

Bryn Mawr College is a distinguished liberal arts college for women with a vibrant faculty of scholar-teachers, a talented staff, and intellectually curious students eager to make a difference in the world. The College is committed to increasing the diversity of its students, faculty, staff, and curricular offerings with a particular focus on enhancing ethnic and racial diversity and advancing social justice and inclusion. We believe diversity strengthens our community and enriches the education of our students. We have a student body of 1,300 undergraduates (32 percent are U.S. students of color and 19 percent are international students). There are 340 graduate students in coeducational graduate programs in social work, humanities, and science. Bryn Mawr College is located in metropolitan Philadelphia and enjoys strong consortial relationships with Haverford College, Swarthmore College, and the University of Pennsylvania. Bryn Mawr College is an equal-opportunity employer; candidates from underrepresented groups and women are especially encouraged to apply.

Department of Physics

Assistant Professor of Physics

The Department of Physics at Bryn Mawr College invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track Assistant Professor position to begin August 1, 2022. We seek an experimentalist in physics, applied physics, or a related field to complement the department's experimental research programs in atomic physics, condensed matter physics, and plasma physics, as well as theoretical programs in astrophysics and high-energy physics. The successful candidate will contribute to the development and teaching of a diverse and inclusive curriculum, including interdisciplinary programs and college-wide initiatives such as the 360 Program and the Emily Balch Seminars. This candidate will also engage in independently defined, externally funded research in collaboration with both undergraduate and graduate students. Candidates must have completed all Ph.D. requirements by the start date. Postdoctoral experience is preferred.

To apply for this position, candidates must submit a cover letter, curriculum vitae, teaching philosophy, research plan that includes a start-up budget and a description of how undergraduate and graduate students can participate in this research, and statement of demonstrated commitment to diversity and inclusion. Please submit your application to the Physics Search Committee via Interfolio at: <https://apply.interfolio.com/90034>. In addition, arrange for three letters of recommendation to be submitted via Interfolio to the Physics Search Committee. Applications received by October 1, 2021 will receive full consideration.

Recognizing health and safety concerns during this time, the College will be as flexible as possible in determining the nature of any interviews or meetings (virtual/remote and/or in-person interaction) that are conducted for this search.

Bryn Mawr College is a distinguished liberal arts college for women with a vibrant faculty of scholar-teachers, a talented staff, and intellectually curious students eager to make a difference in the world. The College is committed to increasing the diversity of its students, faculty, staff, and curricular offerings with a particular focus on enhancing ethnic and racial diversity and advancing social justice and inclusion. We believe diversity strengthens our community and enriches the education of our students. We have a student body of 1,300 undergraduates (32 percent are U.S. students of color and 19 percent are international students). There are 340 graduate students in coeducational graduate programs in social work, humanities, and science. Bryn Mawr College is located in metropolitan Philadelphia and enjoys strong consortial relationships with Haverford College, Swarthmore College, and the University of Pennsylvania. Bryn Mawr College is an equal-opportunity employer; candidates from underrepresented groups and women are especially encouraged to apply.

Department of Political Science

Assistant Professor of Political Science

The Department of Political Science at Bryn Mawr College invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track Assistant Professor position to begin August 1, 2022 in Comparative Politics. The successful candidate will contribute to the development and teaching of a diverse and inclusive undergraduate curriculum, including interdisciplinary programs and college-wide initiatives such as the 360 Program and the Emily Balch Seminars. We are interested in candidates with a primary regional expertise in the Middle East/North Africa, but we will consider applicants whose work additionally links to other areas of the Global South. We are open to any substantive focus except military security and counter-terrorism. The successful applicant will demonstrate the potential to excel in both research and undergraduate teaching. Candidates must have completed all Ph.D. requirements by the start date.

To apply for this position, candidates must submit a cover letter, curriculum vitae, teaching philosophy, research statement, and statement of demonstrated commitment to diversity and inclusion to the Political Science Search Committee via Interfolio at: <https://apply.interfolio.com/90035>. In addition, arrange for three letters of recommendation to be submitted via Interfolio to the Political Science Search Committee. Applications received by October 8, 2021 will receive full consideration.

Recognizing health and safety concerns during this time, the College will be as flexible as possible in determining the nature of any interviews or meetings (virtual/remote and/or in-person interaction) that are conducted for this search.

Bryn Mawr College is a distinguished liberal arts college for women with a vibrant faculty of scholar-teachers, a talented staff, and intellectually curious students eager to make a difference in the world. The College is committed to increasing the diversity of its students, faculty, staff, and curricular offerings with a particular focus on enhancing ethnic and racial diversity and advancing social justice and inclusion. We believe diversity strengthens our community and enriches the education of our students. We have a student body of 1,300 undergraduates (32 percent are U.S. students of color and 19 percent are international students). There are 340 graduate students in coeducational graduate programs in social work, humanities, and science. Bryn Mawr College is located in metropolitan Philadelphia and enjoys strong consortial relationships with Haverford College, Swarthmore College, and the University of Pennsylvania. Bryn Mawr College is an equal-opportunity employer; candidates from underrepresented groups and women are especially encouraged to apply.

Graduate School of Social Work and Social Research

Assistant Professor or Associate Professor of Social Work and Social Reserch

The Graduate School of Social Work and Social Research at Bryn Mawr College invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track Advanced Assistant or Associate Professor position to begin August 1, 2022. The successful candidate will contribute to the development and teaching of a diverse and inclusive curriculum, including interdisciplinary programs and college-wide initiatives such as the 360 Program. We seek an advanced scholar able to support our strategic foci of “health and mental health across the lifespan” and “children, families and society.” The successful candidate will be able to share leadership in our trauma-informed social work initiative and provide mentorship to faculty and students. We seek expertise in areas such as: the impact of early adversity on development, culturally responsive translational research, and/or evidence-informed approaches to substance abuse and addictions. The successful candidate will demonstrate an ability to address issues of power, privilege, and oppression in social work education, research, and practice, while having an understanding of how to bridge “micro” and “macro” social work practice and research. We seek a colleague who brings the ability to teach required courses including social work practice, and who demonstrates a commitment to innovation in teaching. The successful candidate for this position will have an established research agenda, including a record of applying for and receiving external funding. Candidates must have an MSW, at least two years post-MSW practice experience, and a Ph.D. in Social Work or a related discipline by the start date.

To apply for this position, candidates must submit a cover letter, curriculum vitae, teaching philosophy, research statement, and statement of demonstrated commitment to diversity and inclusion to the Graduate School of Social Work and Social Research Search Committee via Interfolio at: <https://apply.interfolio.com/90038>. In addition, arrange for three letters of recommendation to be submitted via Interfolio to the Graduate School of Social Work and Social Research Search Committee. Applications received October 15, 2021 will receive full consideration.

Recognizing health and safety concerns during this time, the College will be as flexible as possible in determining the nature of any interviews or meetings (virtual/remote and/or in-person interaction) that are conducted for this search.

Bryn Mawr College is a distinguished liberal arts college for women with a vibrant faculty of scholar-teachers, a talented staff, and intellectually curious students eager to make a difference in the world. The College is committed to increasing the diversity of its students, faculty, staff, and curricular offerings with a particular focus on enhancing ethnic and racial diversity and advancing social justice and inclusion. We believe diversity strengthens our community and enriches the education of our students. We have a student body of 1,300 undergraduates (32 percent are U.S. students of color and 19 percent are international students). There are 340 graduate students in coeducational graduate programs in social work, humanities, and science. Bryn Mawr College is located in metropolitan Philadelphia and enjoys strong consortial relationships with Haverford College, Swarthmore College, and the University of Pennsylvania. Bryn Mawr College is an equal-opportunity employer; candidates from underrepresented groups and women are especially encouraged to apply.